

Joel Marshall

Welfare and Academic Affairs Officers and Men's Representative Manifesto

Who am I?

I'm Joel Marshall, I'm a first year Theology student, I'm from Hertfordshire, I enjoy Pokémon, Firefly and the work of Neil Gaiman (among other things), if that's interesting to you. Sources say that I'm "really nice" and "easy to talk to" (both of which I try my best to be) and therefore I think I'd make a pretty good Men's Welfare and Academic Rep. If you're still not convinced then I encourage you to read on.

← An example of my good nature

Why do I think I'll be a good Men's Rep?

- I'm easy going and approachable.
- I have a good working relationship with the Dean/Senior Tutor.
- I've got a lot of (admittedly unofficial) experience talking with people about what would probably be classed as "welfare" issues.
- I like talking to people and I'm really happy to help out with anything that's bothering you.
- I'm open and honest, and not one to shy away from any topic which people want to discuss.

What would I do?

- Obviously I'd have the standard weekly surgery hour which I think is a good thing and also mandated by the rules.
- Attend relevant CUSU meetings in order to be as informed and prepared as possible for my work as welfare officer.
- Work closely with other members of the JCR to ensure that Peterhouse has a robust and effective support network in place for all students.
- Make sure that the way distribution of sexual health supplies, bike lights (and anything else we might start giving out) works is clear so people know who to go to.
- Look into running more college welfare events where useful or appropriate.

I'm a non-judgemental person who's always willing to talk about whatever you want or need to discuss, both formally and informally. Basically I'm here to help.

