

The Guide to Peterhouse Clubs, Sports and Societies

AMALS Committee

September 2019

Preface

Amals

Amals (“Amalgamated Clubs”) is the college organisation responsible for the “advancement, support and management of all college sports and societies.” In practice, this means they are responsible for funding, dispute resolution, organising the freshers’ squash, organising society photos, etc.. Amals is run by a committee of three students (President, Secretary & Treasurer, elected in Lent term) and who are the point of contact when organising a club, sport or society. They are also the group who produce and maintain this guide.

Goals of the Guide

It is intended that this guide detail everything the average student will need to engage with the Peterhouse extra-curricular system, including reasonable details of current clubs, sports and societies (Sections I & II), all the necessary details for forming your own club or society (Section IV) and details on where rooms are, which rooms have particular access requirements, etc. (Section III).

Acknowledgements

We are especially grateful to the room points president for providing the first partial list of clubs, sports and societies, and for their explanations of the room points system; to the Amals committee for their general support in producing the guide; to assorted individuals who provided descriptions and details for their various groups, inc. Clubs and Societies “Clubs and Societies” generally describes any organised social group within the college that meets for extra-curricular reasons, excluding sports groups. There’s currently no standardised difference between a club and a society - broadly, you might expect a club to be a smaller group of people, but often groups will retain their name despite vastly changing in size over the years, so this isn’t a hard rule.

Peterhouse Amnesty International Society

Amnesty international society is an activist group set up as a branch of the university-wide society Cambridge University Amnesty International. Typical meetings consist of writing letters about human rights issues, to be sent to presidents, chancellors, prison wardens etc.; a calm and friendly atmosphere is provided.

We also visit other locations, including Fen Drayton nature reserve, home to smews, tufted ducks, great crested & little grebes, and little & great egrets; and London Hyde Park, home to rose-ringed parakeets, Egyptian geese, whooper swans and lesser & greater black-backed gulls.

The quality of singing is high, and the choir is auditioned, but the commitment is relatively low: evensong twice a week plus one rehearsal. All members of the choir are offered formal hall after each of these commitments for free. The choir also sings at feasts, about one each term –again with a free dinner afterwards. All members are entitled to free singing lessons every two weeks, and a heavily subsidised tour each year. There are a few choral scholars each year, but those without choral scholarships can audition for the choir at the beginning of the year and the choir would encourage anyone interested to audition.

Our end-of-term concerts showcase some of the best student musicianship in Cambridge in the brilliant chamber music space of our Theatre.

Sports

“Sports groups” generally describes any group meeting for physical competition, though debating and mootings are both considered sports by the college, and with the rise of digital sports, it’s likely this categorisation will become rapidly more nebulous going into the future. If the distinction is necessary to you for any reason, I would recommend contacting Amals for further guidance.

There are weekly training courts booked, which anyone and everyone is welcome to turn up to, and all equipment is provided. There are also weekly matches for the Open and Ladies’ leagues, with teams decided by the captains, but there is no obligation to play a match if you come along to the open session.

Peterhouse has teamed up with Fitzwilliam and Murray Edwards colleges to form House Hall Fitz mixed lacrosse team - a great opportunity to try a new sport with no commitment and lots of fun. With around 90% of players being beginners, college lacrosse is a great way to room points, new friends and new skills. Being "unsporty" and totally unaware of the rules is not only accepted but the norm in college teams, making this a wonderfully fun college sport. If you happen to have ever played the sport, it's also a great opportunity to practice the skills you've been too frightened to try out seriously before. No need for anything but yourself and preferably a mouthguard - anyone and everyone allowed.

Rooms and Room Locations

The map above was made many years ago, and contains a few minor inaccuracies. None of these have any major impact on the map's utility. Specific details of room locations are given below, with reference to this map. If for any reason you're unable to use this map, please get in contact and an alternative will be sourced. Provided below are locations and descriptions of rooms used by societies included in this guide; if you intended to book a room, contact Anne Gifford.

The Chapel

A spacious and beautifully designed chapel, marked on the map. The main space features tiered pew seating, with natural light entering through large stained-glass windows, and a historic organ. The chapel has step-free access.

F4 Seminar Room

This is a small room located above the servery, in the corner of "old court", between "hall" and "Noah's Ark" on the map. This room is above hall, and the servery staff are often willing to provide cups & water for events and meetings. This location does not have step-free access, though gender-neutral toilets are available on the floor below.

The Friends of Peterhouse Seminar Room

This is a small room located above the servery, near the F4 Seminar Room (above). This room is above hall, and the servery staff are often willing to provide cups & water for events and meetings. This location does not provide step-free access, though gender-neutral toilets are available on the floor below.

Junior Common Room (JCR)/Nightingale Room

This is a large room located in the basement level of the Whittle building, accessible step-free via a lift. The location serves as a casual social space for the undergraduate body of the college, and is opposite the bar. Events here will often be accompanied by other, unrelated activities, such as film watching, pool playing, and perhaps some spillover from the bar, which can be quite loud and disruptive in the evening. It tends to be fairly quiet during the day however, and people tend to be happy to move or be quieter if you have a formal event planned. Being underground the room lacks windows, but the lighting has a pleasantly subdued and atmospheric effect. There are several soft armchairs/sofas and tables, as well as a TV, HDMI cable and games consoles. Toilets, including a disabled/non-binary toilet, are easily accessible just around the corner.

Davidson Room

This is a quite large meeting/function/event room located in the Whittle Building, with step-free access up a shallow ramp from Gisbourne court. The room is well equipped for meetings and other events with numerous tables and chairs which can be configured as required, as well as an overhead projector facing towards a large wall screen. The room has a nice view and lots of natural light through tall windows facing towards that court, and although room ordinarily has an echo, this is reduced if doors and windows are opened. Toilets, including a disabled/non-binary toilet, are located downstairs by the bar and JCR, and are accessible by lift.

The Parlour

This is a medium-sized room located on the first floor of G staircase, which can be found adjacent to the combination room on the map. Large numbers of comfortable armchairs are provided, though no toilets are nearby and there is no step-free access.

Squash Courts

A large building containing an enclosed squash court, located between the William Stone Building and St. Peter's Terrace. A small balcony provides a beautiful viewing spot for games.

Theatre

A large, two-tiered theatre located near the college Ward library, equipped for chamber music performances, stage plays and presentations. Please contact the IT department for a quick guide before using the stage lights. The main entrance of the building provides step-free access; the entrance to the theatre itself involves steps, but wheelchair users can be accommodated - please contact the event organiser if this is relevant.

Upper Hall

A spacious room located directly above the servery, downstairs from the F4 Seminar Room; large windows provide lots of natural light, and vibrant decorations and tapestries adorn the walls. An adjacent lift provides step-free access, and gender-neutral toilets are available down the corridor. A cloakroom is also present on this floor.

Starting or Running a Club or Society

This section of the guide is intended to walk you through the process of setting up, running, and funding a peterhouse-based society. Obviously the fine details will depend on the purpose of and general interest in your society, but the broad themes will hopefully be the same.

Setting up a Club or Society

The first step in setting up a club or society must be to have at least a broad idea of the purpose. It's not necessary to have every detail fleshed out from the get-go, but having a purpose nailed down is a strong springboard to launch your society. Will you be birdwatching? Appreciating fine art? Ransacking rival colleges? All acceptable, all good ideas for societies you should definitely make. Once the purpose has been decided, you need to start assessing interest. You can informally ask a few friends, make a post on the college facebook group ("Would anybody be interested in a society for stealing art pieces from the fitz museum? Message me ;3"), ask the Sexcentenary club or Amals to send out an email for you, or otherwise just generally gauge the desire for the kind of society you want to make. Wait a few days/weeks for responses, and depending on the engagement, you have a few different options. If lots of people express enthusiasm for your idea, congrats, skip ahead a bit! Otherwise, if very few people (around 2-3) are interested, you may want to look at forming a uni-wide society, in order to expand the pool of potential members. CUSU has lots of information about how to do this, but it is unfortunately beyond the scope of this guide.

Reviving an inactive club or society

Often, as a result of waning interest, or improper management, or a host of other reasons, societies will cease to function. Often, they will quietly fade from existence, but sometimes they will still be vaguely present within the college, merely non-functional. Reviving a society, as opposed to starting a new one, has several benefits: often, interest will be higher (for strange psychological reasons), there will still be remnants in place you can use to reduce the workload, and you can nod knowingly at new members and say "yes, this is a very old and storied society wink wink". Great fun. If you want to bring back a society, the steps are generally similar to starting afresh, with the added benefit of being able to lean on the resources and branding of the old group. As a first step, it's sensible to get in contact with the person most recently in charge of the defunct society, and ask for their permission to revive it, and support in doing so - they will likely have documentation and ideas that can be hugely useful in kickstarting the revival. Beyond that, follow the same steps as you would if you were starting from scratch, using the structures already in place to accelerate the process.

Forming a committee

Committees aren't always necessary - if the activities of a society are minimal, and the society is small, you can often get away with simply operating it as a one-person team. However, it's often much more fun, and far easier, to have a few people to work with. An "executive committee" will be responsible for running the society, reaching out to new members, keeping in contact with the Sexcentenary committee and Amals, applying for funding, and generally organising the day-to-day affairs of the society. There are two main ways employed in peterhouse to elect people to a committee: democratic elections, and co-opting. Elections are typically held at an Annual General Meeting, or AGM, and involve "hustings" (a short speech or presentation by candidates on why they would be suitable for the role, and what they would bring to it) and the actual voting itself. Co-opting involves candidates submitting an application, to be reviewed by the current exec committee. The exec committee can then select the most suitable candidate(s), without the need for a majority vote. Below are described a few of the common roles on a society committee, along with their typical responsibilities. Often these roles will be found under different names, though will be functionally the same (e.g. "bard" or "scribe" in place of "secretary"; "geldjarl" or "dragon" in place of "treasurer").

- President/Chair: This is typically a glorified management role. The chair is responsible for ensuring everyone is fulfilling their role, assigning duties, and generally making sure the society is functioning smoothly. Any duties that don't fall neatly into another role on the committee will be the domain of the chair, either to reassign or carry out themself.

- Vice president/Vice chair: This role is only typical in very large societies. The vice chair will usually take over the duties of the chair in the case they are unable to fulfill them, will ensure the committee is happy & able to carry out their roles, and provide advice and support to the chair.
- Secretary: This role will be responsible for communications - taking minutes at meetings, sending out emails, making facebook posts, and acting as the first point of contact for people looking to engage the society. Will not bring you coffee, and you shouldn't have asked.
- Treasurer: The treasurer will be in charge of all financial matters, which generally means applying for Amals funding, submitting reimbursement requests, and planning the budget at the start of the year.
- Webmaster: The webmaster will be responsible for the online presence of the society. They will be responsible for maintaining any facebook groups or mailing lists, digital storage of all important documents (e.g. constitution & standing orders, minutes, budget breakdown), and for making vague, nonsensical facebook posts about the role of icelandic myths in modern conflict resolution.

Formalising and publicising your society

Once you have the groundwork for your society laid out, you should think about affiliating it with Amals. In practice, this will just involve messaging the current Amals president to say "I've formed a society, this is the purpose, we have however many people already interested, and have put on these events/plan to put on these events". This is the only necessary step to become a "recognised society"; this is probably also the time to create the constitution and standing orders (next section) if you intend to. Once you're affiliated, you can apply for funding from Amals (this is possible once per year, usually near the beginning of Michaelmas - last year, the deadline was 30th september), and are entitled to present your society at the "fresher's squash", shortly after freshers week in Michaelmas term. This is a great opportunity to recruit new members to your society, but it isn't the only one. You can post on the college facebook group, tuck flyers for your society in people's pigeonholes, put up posters in the JCR, and submit a description of your society to this very guide, among other things, to increase the profile of your society, and gather up everyone who might be interested.

Constitution and Standing Orders

It's not always necessary to have a constitution or standing orders, especially for small & informal societies. Often, when implemented, these documents will have little impact on the day-to-day running of the club or society, usually with the exception of committee elections, etc.

A point of concern is often what needs to be in either document. Unfortunately, there is no standard for what should go where. Broadly speaking, the constitution covers everything that needs to be formal (so the roles of the committee, how open meetings run), while standing orders cover additional minutiae (e.g. if there's any specific events that need to be regulated, if there's a specific way you want communications to go out) and everything else doesn't need to be formalised.

Handover

Eventually, your term in office will come to an end, and you will need to hand the reins to other students. Often, this is the point where projects will be abandoned, and traditions and information will be lost. One way of preventing this is having handover documents and discussions. Again, there's no standard guide for what to include in a handover, beyond "things that are important to the role". Included here are a few ideas for things to include in a handover, but these shouldn't be construed as comprehensive, or even representative. If the role involves running or planning events, it's generally a good idea to include details of which locations worked best for you and why, what times you found had the most engagement, and any particular things you've tried that worked well or didn't work well. If you were working on any long-term projects in the role (for example, working to increase the diversity of speakers invited to specific talks), the handover should include details of the project, what steps you've taken so far, and roughly what you would intend to do next were you to continue the role. Generally, the handover should contain a full description of the role, and the various duties that have fallen under it. Often, it's a good plan to include suggestions for what to do in the role moving forward. At this point in time, you should contact Amals again to let them know the new leadership & treasurer.

Submitting a budget for AMALS funding

Applying for funding from AMALS is straightforward, although people seem to often be concerned that they will either not apply for enough or will apply for too much.

A good starting point is to speak to the previous captain or head of your club or society, as they can advise you of the usual annual costs and share their experience with you – maybe they will suggest things that the club or society may benefit from having next year. Consider what you might want to purchase to improve the club or society and then estimate the total funding required for the year.

You may want to add on a moderate amount in case certain things end up costing more than expected. Historically, people have often applied for much more than they will need; AMALS would prefer that a more realistic amount is applied for so that, if a society were to exhaust their budget, it would be easier to give them extra funding as the total AMALS budget for the year would be lower.

Example budget submission:

I'm captaining the Men's Football this year. I would like to claim £500 for the year - £165 of which as expenses from last year.

The league fees come to around £100 in total and I intend to purchase spare kit like football boots, shin pads, goalkeeper gloves etc. The reason for that is if people want to try out College football I don't want their lack of kit to stop them from trying it, however after that they would have to buy their own kit if they were continuing to play.

Also, we should have enough players this year to run training sessions and so I'd like to buy cones and speed ladders for training drills. I will be purchasing some more footballs too so we have enough for the trainings.

I am aware I am claiming more than last year and the reason for that is from conversations with last year's captain he explained he underbudgeted and didn't request enough funding to cover all the costs.

The above example submission is good in that it describes how the money will be used and explains why the budget applied for is higher than last year. However, it would be much better if it had estimated costs for all things referenced and was more succinct:

I'm captaining the Men's Football this year. I would like to claim £500 for the year, broken down as follows:

- League fees - around £100 total
- Spare kit (football boots, shin pads, goalkeeper gloves etc.) - estimated £100

if people want to try out College football I don't want their lack of kit to stop them from trying it, however after that they would have to buy their own kit if they were continuing to play

- 2 Footballs - £30
- Expenses from last year - £165

I am aware I am claiming more than last year and the reason for that is from conversations with last year's captain he explained he underbudgeted and didn't request enough funding to cover all the costs.

This examples still has all the detail needed including specific equipment, which you don't need to include but please do if you would like! A quick look online at how much certain things are likely to cost is enough to estimate costs of most things and in this example, based on the estimated costs, there should be £85 of the budget left after all these expenses which is a reasonable excess. Applying for £600 would leave nearly a third of the budget as excess which is unnecessary.

The budget process really isn't very complicated or difficult and doesn't need as long, detailed or boring an explanation as the one above! This was just trying to help clarify things that people often get concerned about.

The bottom line is if you need AMALS' help, we will be there and please don't be afraid to get in touch with questions.

Misc.

If you've read this far, you should be firmly on track to having a well-functioning club or society. If there's anything you want clarification on, or anything you feel is missing from this section of the guide, please get in contact by emailing the Amals committee!
